

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

This invention provides systems and methods for the processing and handling of enrollment, authentication, and subsequent verification of the identity of passengers and employees or workers in the transportation industry by pre-enrolling the individual to collect, among other things, personal information. The collected information is vetted through a series of background checks. Upon satisfactory completion of the background checks, the individual is enrolled into the system and is issued an identity token.